

Blog Posts

Ransomware: Should organizations pay or not?

Ransomware

For this topic we will discuss about ransomware and if organisations should pay or not the answer is never, a organisation should never pay and i will explain why lets dive a bit deeper, Paying ransome is not the best approach to take when your organisation is under attack from a threat it may seem so but the reason is when paying ransom you are not 100% guaranteed the hackers will release your data and could risk losing your company millions of dollars, another bad outcome would be that paying ransomware could potentially interfere with your insurance policy you have this could drastically affect your organisation if you have costs that need to be covered to assist your business after an attack, this is usually depends on your organisation and what insurance they have, also this increases the vulnerabiltiy for future attacks, this could lead hackers to learn more about the organisations security infastructure during the negotiation hence why this is not the best option and the organisation should focus more on building a stronger network security.